Background

Assembly Bill 118 (Núñez, Chapter 750, Statutes of 2007), created the Alternative and Renewable Fuel and Vehicle Technology (ARFVT) Program. The statute, subsequently amended by AB 109 (Núñez, Chapter 313, Statutes of 2008), authorizes the California Energy Commission to develop and deploy alternative and renewable fuels and advanced transportation technologies to help attain the state's climate change policies.

The 2011/2012 Investment Plan recognized that "...state support is needed to build regional fueling networks, ensure a reliable supply of [hydrogen] fuel, and establish fueling stations in regions with more modest Fuel Cell Vehicle (FCV) [deployment] commitments through 2014." The Investment Plan directs the ARFVT Program to "match supply to demand" by funding infrastructure projects which meet the fuel demands of FCV drivers in California.

The regional fueling networks will support the alternative transportation fuel and vehicle technology goals of the state of California, such as the Zero Emissions Vehicle Program, which requires 14 percent of certain auto manufacturers' model year-2015 fleets to be zero-emission vehicles, and the Low Carbon Fuel Standard, which is designed to reduce the carbon intensity of transportation fuels by 10 percent by 2020.

In March 2012, Governor Brown issued Executive Order B-16-12 directing state agencies to help accelerate the market for zero-emission vehicles (ZEVs) in California. The Executive Order established several milestones on a path toward 1.5 million ZEVs in California by the year 2025. The 2013 ZEV Action Plan identifies specific strategies and actions that state agencies will take to meet milestones of the Executive Order.

The first goal of the ZEV Action Plan is to complete needed infrastructure and planning. The Energy Commission has been tasked to ensure that California's hydrogen fueling infrastructure network can ensure a reliable supply of hydrogen fuels in areas of planned fuel cell vehicle deployment.
