Purpose

These workshops will inform stakeholders of the Energy Commission's preliminary guidelines for making available ARRA SEP funding for these three programs. Energy Commission staff will discuss the expectations for each of the three programs, seek input on the preliminary guidelines, and address questions. All workshops will follow the same agenda and address the same topics.

The preliminary guidelines will be provided in advance of the workshops and will be available online at <http://www.energy.ca.gov/recovery/meetings/>.

Background

The California Energy Commission has developed the preliminary guidelines to administer the ARRA State Energy Program (SEP) for three specific program areas. ARRA was enacted to preserve and create jobs and promote economic recovery, to assist those most impacted by the recession, and to provide investments needed to increase economic efficiency by spurring technological advances, and to make investments that will have long-term economic benefits.

The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) encourages states to develop SEP strategies that align with national goals: increasing jobs, reducing US oil dependency through increases in energy efficiency and deployment of renewable energy technologies, promoting economic vitality through an increase in "green jobs," and reducing green house gas emissions. DOE encourages states to focus their program efforts on market transformation initiatives and actions that align with these national goals. Market transformation is defined as: "Strategic interventions that cause lasting changes in the structure or function of a market or the behavior of market participants, resulting in an increase in adoption of energy efficiency and renewable energy products, services, and practices."

The preliminary guidelines summarize how the Energy Commission plans to implement the ARRA SEP Program for the three specific program areas identified above.
