Commissioner Andrew McAllister
New York, NY
June 25-28, 2019

North American Passive House Network (NAPHN)

The North American Passive House Network (NAPHN) is a non-profit educational organization that seeks to promote the low-energy, high performance Passive House design within the building industry. NAPHN engages with building professionals, policymakers, labor organizations, educational institutions, and the public to provide training and conferences on the Passive House construction standards, building science principles, and protocols.

Attachment, Section 3.2

Commissioner McAllister attended NAPHN's annual conference from June 26-28, 2019. He participated in the event's policy track, where invited leaders shared and discussed energy policies that support or align with the Passive House design. Specifically, the commissioner provided updates on California's clean energy policy and residential energy efficiency activities, which serve as leading models for other national and subnational entities. Commissioner McAllister's physical attendance also provided a unique opportunity to engage directly with a diverse group of professional leaders in the building construction industry.
